

ABSTRACT

A burglar alarm light includes a shell, a lamp set located in the shell, and a shade coupled on the front end of the shell. The shell further has an adjustment mechanism located therein to adjust the displacement of the lamp set thereby to alter light projection type (converging or scattering) emitted from a light source.